Ambit Energy Receives Best Places to Work Honors Twice

Dallas-based energy provider recognized by two Dallas newspapers

(DALLAS) – Ambit Energy, a Dallas-based leader among retail energy providers, was recently named as one of Dallas' best places to work by both the Dallas Morning News and the Dallas Business Journal.

"We are honored to be ranked as one of the best places to work in Dallas by both major news publications," said Ambit Energy CEO Jere Thompson, Jr. "From our headquarters in Dallas to our Plano call center, we operate in a transparent, focused environment where our employees enjoy working to provide superior service for our customers. We value their opinions and encourage input from everyone."

In the Dallas Morning News Top 100 Places to Work 2009 listing, Ambit Energy was ranked 35 overall in a single category that highlighted companies, regardless of size, that excel at creating and maintaining a dynamic, supportive and inclusive workplace despite the current recession. Additionally, the company was ranked 14 among companies categorized as "midsize" (100-499 employees in Dallas/Fort Worth).

In the Dallas Business Journal Best Places to Work awards, Ambit Energy was ranked 34 in the "midsize company" category. Announced in September, the DBJ awards were given to 162 businesses in north Texas for being deemed a great place to work according to national best practice scores, as determined by the program's research partner.

"We strive for a culture where employees have the tools and training they need to be successful at their work," said Thompson. "The key to our success is the open communication inside our offices. We look forward to carrying this momentum into 2010 and beyond as we strive to become the finest and most respected energy provider in the country."
